COLORS ARE DOFFED

Governor's Lady Recognized
By Huge Crowd in The Mammoth Parade

By William S. Neal
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent
HOUSTON, Tex., June 28.—They all cheered—all but Mrs. Alfred E. Smith and her children.

The rafters of Convention Hall shook under the tumult which followed Franklin Roosevelt's nomination of the New Yorker to head the Democratic presidential ticket.

Dazzling lights of photographers played over the vast arena as men and women mounted chairs to flaunt their colors.

Richly gowned women in the boxes near the Governor's party rose as one—but not the governor's lady.

Mrs. George Glynn, the candidate's sister, was wreathed in smiles. Two younger children—Alfred, Jr., and his sister, Katherine—peered into the far distant corners of the arena, their faces lighted with curiosity and eagerness.

It was the first great moment of the convention for the Smith family. They met it in silence.

And then—the parade started.

Thousands—perhaps foes as well as friends—joined in the tumultuous procession, infected with the thought that a president was in the making.

The parade's turning point carried it directly before the box of the governor's lady. She was recognized. Colors were doffed.

And then she, and her family as well, relaxed from the tension. She smiled.

An ecstatic delegate shouted "We're proud of Al" and she waved a handkerchief.

A Wisconsin delegate brandished a drawing of the White House and the sign "Al's next home." She laughed outright.

A poorly clad woman tiptoed to shake her hands. She responded with a hearty handclasp.

The entire family melted under the acclaim and joined in the spirit of the occasion.

The tumult ceased, the crowd thinned. Quickly Mrs. Smith settled back and resumed her stoic mien.

Clad in a purple dress, with a diamond breast pin and rings flashing, she sat silently through other speeches.

Thus did Mrs. Alfred E. Smith meet her first great test of popular homage as possible "first lady of the land."

Mrs. Susanna Smith Dies
At Her Home Here

Mrs. Susanna Smith, wife of Lewis A. Smith, was claimed by death today at her home, 608 Clymer street.

The deceased is survived by her husband, several children, and grandchildren. For some time she made her residence in Hulmeville, a few years ago removing to Bristol.

The funeral will be held on Saturday, at 2 p. m., from her late home, with burial in Bristol Cemetery.

START REPAIR WORK AT
NESHAMINY CREEK BRIDGE

Pier and Portion of Curtain
Wall Are Blasted
Out

TO DO WORK AT ONCE

CROYDON, June 28.—Work on blasting out the pier and a portion of the curtain wall at the eastern end of the new concrete bridge which spans the Neshaminy Creek, here, was started yesterday.

For a greater portion of the day workmen were kept busy placing the dynamite fuses, and many passers-by stopped to watch as the small particles shot into the air and then fell into the waters of the creek.

The section of the curtain wall which gave way is about 20 feet in length, and it is expected that work of pouring the concrete for the new part as well as that for replacing the pier will be commenced the latter part of next week. This work will likewise necessitate some time as much detail is concerned in laying the steel section and moulding of the portions about them.

The roadway, which will be approximately 30 feet wide at the span, will be laid as soon as the bridge proper is finished. A large corps of workmen are employed just now in tearing out the old section.

With the completion of the structure much time and some mileage will be saved the motorists traveling this highway.

HOME FROM HOSPITAL

"Little "Billy" Hogarth, of Garden street, has returned to his home after a successful operation for appendicitis. "Billy" was taken suddenly ill at his sister Norma's birthday party ten days ago and was rushed to the hospital to be operated upon immediately. He is expected to be running playing around with his friends again in the near future.

TRENTON WOMAN DIES
ON MORRISVILLE STREET

Mrs. Walter A. Pullen, 64,
Succumbs to Attack of Heart Trouble

WAS VISITING A FRIEND

MORRISVILLE, June 28.—Mrs. Walter A. Pullen, 64, of 58 Garfield avenue, Trenton, N. J., dropped dead upon one of the streets of this borough last evening, when taking leave of a friend. Death was attributed to heart trouble. On frequent occasions she had suffered similar attacks of illness.

Mrs. Pullen, who had made a trip here in order to pay for shares in a building and loan society, had later visited Mrs. Blinn on Pennsylvania avenue in the Morrisville Heights section. As she made her way to the trolley the Trenton woman stooped to kiss the small child of Mrs. Blinn good-bye, and it was then she was stricken.

Dr. James M. Klenk was summoned, but death had been instantaneous. The body was taken to Hooper's morgue, and later removed to the late home of the deceased in Trenton, N. J. The husband, Walter A. Pullen, survives.

Annual Supper To Be Given At Eddington

The annual supper served at the Eddington Presbyterian Church, will take place on the evening of Thursday, July 12th.

The Ladies' Aid Society is sponsoring the affair, and will serve the usual tasty menu. Tickets will be placed on sale the fore part of next week, and the proceeds will be used for the church.

—Philip Murphy, of Beaver street, and William McLaughlin, of Philadelphia, will spend Wednesday, July 4th, at Sea Isle City, N. J., deep sea fishing.

EFFECT OF LAFAYETTE'S IDEALS ON WORLD
TODAY GRAPHICALLY TOLD AT CELEBRATION
OF BATTLE OF MONMOUTH BY LEGIONNAIRE

National Commander Edward E. Spafford Tells Patriots That Principles Are Realized, Living On in Fact After
His Being Has Turned to Dust

FREEHOLD, N. J., June 28.—The effect of Lafayette's ideals on the world today and how his greatest service to France came through those ideals when the Stars and Stripes took their place beside the Tri-color in the World War, was told by Edward E. Spafford, national commander of the American Legion, at the sesqui-centennial celebration of the Battle of Monmouth here today.

Commander Spafford spoke as follows:

"Ideals live on after the material being has been turned to dust.

"One hundred and fifty years ago a young man whose soul was filled with three great ideals was charging over this territory harassing a foe who was denying to the people of this land one of those principles.

"The young man was Lafayette, commissioned while not yet 21 as a major general in the United States army. Here in a foreign land this French youth was making practicable and feasible with his military training, his personal fortune, his keen judgment and his abounding human sympathy, the advent of the first of those three great purposes for which he was to dedicate his life. These were the ideals of liberty: The independence of conscience; the independence of service, and the freedom of worship.

"Today, these principles are realities. Lafayette's idealism lives on as fact although his being has turned to dust.

"Picture him in his first revolution: The lithe figure of youth neatly dressed; gray eyes alight with mature responsibility; red hair; receding forehead and long nose; seeking the places of danger should duty call; an indifferent horseman mixing in the middle of the fray at every opportunity.

"The night before the battle of Monmouth he turned over to General Charles Lee the command of the vanguard of the American army. He had volunteered to direct the troops when Lee demurred. He was fired with the opportunity of winning glory for liberty! Lee, distressed that his own honor was at stake had pleaded that the command be returned to himself. Out of his sympathy, respect and love for Washington, the young French general had courteously relieved the situation, after repeated appeals by Lee, and forthwith redoubled his efforts to promote the victory for freedom under Lee's orders. A man not uplifted by an ideal would have sulked in his tent.

"The youth, who was later to be called the 'man of two worlds,' and the 'man of four revolutions,' was known as the Soldier's Friend. Washington gave him the confidence he would have given a brother, and the love he would have given a son. The Continental Congress and all those in authority believed in and trusted him from the day he first visited congress and made the humble demand that contrasted so beautifully with the proud claims of some preceding adventurers and soldiers of fortune.

"Looked upon at first as another of the numerous foreign mercenaries, Lafayette quickly replied: 'After the sacrifices I have made, I have the right to exact two favors: One is, to serve at my own expense. The other is, to serve as a volunteer.'

"May the slacker, the conscientious objector and the extreme pacifist of our own generation take note of that!

"The young French officer, momentarily disappointed with the promise America's envoy made in Paris, immediately turned suspicion and embarrassment at Philadelphia into confidence, and the commission of major general, at first an honorary title but soon made an active one, was granted with increasing thanksgiving on the part of the Continental Congress.

"Lafayette had come to America a few weeks before, landing on the sandy shores of South Carolina, sixty miles from Charleston, June 14, 1777, after outwitting his own King who sought to have him arrested in the West Indies to avoid trouble with England.

"An officer of the Black Musketeers, recruited from the nobility to protect the Royal person, Lafayette had fitted out a ship at his own expense and had slipped away from his King, his wife and child he adored, his friends and all the comforts and luxury the world then knew. News of American reverses had reached his ears before he sailed. That only made him the more determined. He felt his arrival would encourage new and greater efforts if he joined the fortunes of the colonists in their darkest hour of danger and despair.

"His surprise at finding no peasantry in America and his admiration for the open-hearted hospitality of all Americans with whom he came in contact knew no bounds. His passion for the freedom of these people grew apace. All whom he met on the trip from South Carolina to Philadelphia, and everything he saw, charmed him.

"Recognized by those who came to know him as sincere, brave, courteous and loyal, Lafayette, when welcomed with open arms by Washington at the latter's camp amidst the ragged, poorly armed troops who knew nothing of drill or tactics, checked a note of apology by saying:

"I came to learn, not to teach."

"The gallantry of the young Frenchman was something at which to marvel. He had shed his blood on American soil at Brandywine, and it was his gallantry, one hundred and fifty years ago today, that saved his life in the Battle of Monmouth.

RENOVATING THEATRE
AT CROYDON MANOR

Extensive Improvements Are Now Being Made To Playhouse

A VENTILATING SYSTEM

CROYDON, June 28.—Patrons of the Manor Theatre, here, will be surprised and very much pleased when the final touches for remodeling the playhouse are done.

Otto Grupp, Jr., owner of the building, has had the entire interior of the theatre redecorated and some marked alterations made thereto.

The rows of chairs in the auditorium have been reupholstered in dark brown leather. Another new feature is the lowering of the floor, in order to better enable the patrons to enjoy the performance upon the screen.

One of the latest features that has been added is a new ventilating system. Through this the air is changed in the theatre every two minutes. This is a decided improvement, and one that will add greatly to the comfort of those who visit the show-house. This system is electrically operated. The color scheme throughout is rose and gold. New draperies have been hung at the exits, and at the rear of the auditorium. The main curtain stretched across the large stage is also of the same pattern and color, and all are most attractive. The figured draperies are finished with a neat fringe.

Paint has also been applied to the walls of the interior, this being a light buff, touches here and there of other shades blending into the color plan.

Many Croydonites file into the playhouse each night it is open, and a splendid trade is now being enjoyed by the owner and manager. Pictures are being shown on Monday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday evenings.

The place was first opened to the public last fall.

JOSEPH RAGO WEDS
MISS NANCY CERVELLI

Ceremony Took Place in St.
Ann's Church Yesterday Afternoon

BIG RECEPTION IS HELD

Yesterday afternoon at four o'clock, Miss Nancy Cervelli, daughter of Mrs. Josephine Cervelli, of 203 Mill street, and Joseph Rago, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dominick Rago, of 903 Inlet street, were married in St. Ann's church.

Miss Anna Archer, of Mill street, was bridesmaid, and Miss Ida Gulotto, maid of honor.

Michael Rago, brother of the groom, acted as best man.

The bride was charmingly costumed in bridal satin, lace trimmed. She wore a lace veil held in place with a wreath of orange blossoms and also trimmed with baby ribbon. She also carried an arm bouquet of Easter lilies.

The bridesmaid, Miss Archer, was very lovely in an orchid taffeta frock trimmed with tulle. She wore a large picture hat to match her gown, silver cloth slippers and silver-toned stockings and carried an arm bouquet of yellow roses.

The maid of honor, Miss Gulotto, wore a beautiful maize colored gown, a picture hat to match, trimmed with orchid, silver cloth slippers and silver-toned stockings and carried an arm bouquet of yellow roses.

A reception and dinner was held in their newly built and furnished home is one of the show places on the State Highway, between Green Lane and Hayes street, which was constructed under the direction of the groom, who is engaged in the work of contractor and builder.

Following the reception the happy couple left for a two weeks' honeymoon trip to be spent in Atlantic City, N. J.

Mr. and Mrs. Rago have been presented with many lovely gifts.

WAR RELIC EXHIBIT WILL FEATURE JUBILEE

German and French Helmets, Side Arms, Gas Masks
and Hand Grenades

TO OPEN THIS EVENING

A spirit of activity prevails just now on the plot of ground bounded by the highway, Pond and Market streets, as final arrangements and plans are being carried out for the American Legion Jubilee of the Robert W. Bracken Post.

Three nights will the fete be in full swing, with the cadets adding their bit by staging a parade about the principal streets of the borough each night previous to the arrival of the expected crowds.

The plot is being made attractive by the placing of colored lights and flags. Stands and booths have been placed in readiness to hold the fine assortment of merchandise.

Included in the list of attractions will be a group of World War relics, a portion of which are owned by the local post, and some of which have been donated for display purposes by ex-service men. There are German and French helmets, side arms, German gas masks and machine guns, rifles, hand grenades, volley pistols, belts, buckles, etc. The relics were brought to this country from the war zone and are well worth seeing.

The "Streets of Bagdad" promise much, and the merchandise list includes: Umbrellas, floor and bridge lamps, cooking utensils, glassware, Spanish shawls, rugs. Woolly rabbits and nice large toy dogs will attract the attention of the wee tots. The dogs are said to stand two feet high.

On these warm nights during June Bristolians will have an opportunity of quenching their thirst, at the same time enjoying the attractions of the jubilee. Orangeade, ice cold, will be included in the soft drinks, and then there is promised ice cream, candy and hot "dogs."

Members of the Bracken post will be in charge of the numerous booths, the proceeds of the three-night affair going to the bugle corps. A portion of the sum will be used by the buglers for defraying their expenses at the state convention of the American Legion at Uniontown the latter part of August.

It is requested by the men that individuals refrain from parking on the plot used for the jubilee on the next three evenings. Adequate parking space is promised near the scene, either on Market street or other near by thoroughfares.

Robert Downing heads the jubilee committee, and he has a most able corps of assistants. This is the second affair of this nature sponsored by the Bracken Post, and the public is assured a jolly evening right in the heart of the business section.

Boy Knocked Down By Car; Not Seriously Hurt

John Cocordus, 129 Mill street, was struck and knocked down by an automobile driven by George Irwin, last night, at the intersection of Mill and Cedar streets.

Cocordus was taken to the office of Dr. George T. Fox where he was treated for the injuries about the head and side. The boy was not seriously hurt.

POSTPONE MEETING

The meeting to be held by the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Harriman Hospital in the auxiliary rooms on Friday evening, in connection with the lawn fete, will be postponed until Monday evening at the same location. This change has been made due to the fact that Mrs. H. R. Shipp, president of the Auxiliary has been called out of town.

INVITE COUNCIL TO ATTEND EXERCISES;
FLAG PRESENTATION

Committee Arranging Program
For Affair To Be Held Here

MORNING OF JULY 4TH

Short Street Parade to Be Held
Previous to Flag Raising Exercises

Members of Borough Council are to be invited to attend in a body the flag presentation ceremonies which are to be held at the Municipal Building on the morning of July 4th. This announcement was made today by Arthur P. Brady, chairman of the General Committee.

There is to be a short street parade previous to the presentation exercises which are to take place in front of the Municipal Building, Pond and Mulberry streets.

The parade will form at the headquarters of Robert W. Bracken Post, No. 382, American Legion. There will be members of the Legion and the American Legion Cadets and members of Borough Council and Boy Scouts in line. The parade will then proceed to Walnut street, to Radcliffe, to Mill, to Pond, to Mulberry street. A detail of police will head the line.

Upon arriving at the Municipal Building there will be a short program at which time the flag will be presented to the borough. It is the intention of the committee to present the flag to the Borough and have it flown from the new flag pole, recently erected, every day. It will be the Borough's official flag.

Tentative plans call for a patriotic oration by a speaker of national prominence, group singing led by Percy G. Ford, presentation of the flag on behalf of a group of local organizations by J. Leslie Kilcoyne, Esq., who is a member of American Legion, Bristol Lodge of Elks and the Exchange Club, three of the organizations in the group; selection by American Legion Cadets, and then the raising of the flag.

A committee is working out the details which will be announced later.

CROWDS JAM INTO HALL
TO PLAY CARDS HERE

Affair Given by Knights of Columbus Breaks All Records

THERE WERE 100 TABLES

One of the largest card parties given in Bristol for some time past was held in St. Mark's Hall last evening by the Knights of Columbus.

There were 100 tables of players and the hall was filled to capacity. Five hundred, pinochle, bridge and euchre were played.

The prizes which were awarded to the winners were numerous, there being over 150 beautiful and useful gifts, such as a rug, size 9x12, ton of coal, various small size rugs, lamps, kitchen utensils, several bags of flour, hams, all kinds of wearing apparel for men and women, basket of fruit, smoking set, magazine racks and many others.

During the evening a basket of fruit was given away. Miss Sarah Nabbits, Trenton, N. J., was the winner. Five dollars in gold was also given away and William Slater captured this.

A light lunch consisting of sandwiches, coffee, cake and soft drinks which was prepared by the committee, was sold. This booth was well patronized and a neat sum will be realized.

The committee with Thomas Collier, as chairman, wishes to take this opportunity of thanking all for the co-operation in making the party such a success.

High scores in pinochle were: Miss Ruth Hinn, 745; Miss N. Ennis, 738; Mrs. J. Petruska, 736; Andy Irwin, 733; P. O'Brien, 729; Mrs. Helen Dixon, 713; Thomas Somers, 693; M. Lippincott, 672; Joseph Fox, 671; William Slater, 665; John Ennis, Jr., 665; Mrs. Anna Barnfield, 662; F. J. Craver, 661; Mrs. J. S. Coleman, 660; Joseph Rodgers, 658; John McFadden, 654; N. J. SEEING AMERICA'S WONDERS

As a hotelkeeper, the secretary of the interior entertains millions of guests each summer. No boniface ever catered to such numbers. The national parks are his hostelry.

Last year national park visitors numbered 2,355,000. They were less than 500,000 ten years ago. If the normal rate of increase is maintained close to 3,000,000 people will see the national parks this year.

Responsibility for acting as host to such vast numbers of visitors was not foreseen when the National Park Service was created in 1916. The purpose of the government was to preserve the country's natural wonders and playgrounds; it did not allow for the development of automobile touring and an annual invasion by great armies of eager sightseers.

Most of the national parks are in the Far West, yet hundreds of thousands of men, women and children from the Atlantic Coast states visit them in the course of a year. Within a few years equal numbers from the Pacific Coast will be traveling eastward to visit the beautiful national parks that are being developed in the Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia and the Great Smokies of North Carolina and Tennessee. Lafayette National Park on Mount Desert Island off the Maine coast already attracts many visitors from every state.

One of the amazing contrasts presented by the United States and Europe relates to this tourist travel. American wage earners travel farther to "see America first" than the European immigrant who has had to work and save for years to buy passage.

BRISTOL GARDENS LOVELY

The forehanded gardener is contemplating the lovely mallow blooms in his garden, the late roses, the ripening tomatoes and that profusion of long-blooming flowers with which Nature prefaces the fall, and he is reflecting that now is the time to steal a season and plan for another year. There is a surprising number of things that winter does not harm but which, if planted in the fall, gather strength and substance underground and so are a season ahead when spring comes.

The whole art and science of amateur gardening is comprised in patience and thoroughness. Hardy bulbs can be planted in the fall, the crocuses and hyacinths which gladden Easter tide. Most perennials profit by fall planting.

Bristol gardens are lovely this year as anyone who takes the unaccustomed exercise of walking through suburban streets and avenues can not help noticing. The glories of one's own garden should be sufficient stimulus to lay the plans for a colorful setting next year, and it is almost time to begin the work, while the planning is due now.

If all dreams were to come true nightmares might come too true too.

Liberty is safe for one man only when he is willing to grant other men theirs.

Because a man is old it is not necessary that he think horse and buggy thoughts.

The fish the president caught were appropriate, meaning they were of conservative weight.

Rheumatism may have been Nature's first primitive effort to establish a weather bureau.

SYNOPSIS

The evening's revelry is at its height in Kelly's razzle-dazzle in the Bowery. In the soft semi-darkness, bodies writhe to the whine of the saxophone and the odor of cheap perfumes is heavy on the dance floor. Streamers of varicolored crepe paper hang from the ceiling to the booths where girls with brilliant lips and tight-fitting bodices are sitting smoking and drinking with their escorts. As Chuck White, the beau of the Bowery, is steering his partner, lovely Rose Shannon, around the floor, a man bumps into her rudely. Chuck resents the action. He would have grappled with him but Rose restrains him.

CHAPTER I—Continued

But Rose Shannon was smiling once more, and gazing up at Chuck with those fresh, wide eyes, and he couldn't help returning the smile. For when Rose's pink lips opened, tiny dimples came into the corner of her mouth, and another dimple suddenly appeared in her left cheek and seemed to make one want to do nothing but laugh, too. And then her nose had a bewitching wrinkle. And her eyes—well, they'd simply knock anyone cuckoo, according to Chuck White.

"Say, youse could have easy pickin', Chuck."

cord to Chuck White. Deep, as the sea; then suddenly all light and full of sparkle, like a beautifully cut sapphire beneath a strong light. "Love me, kid?" His head was close to hers now; his arm about her waist pressed her soft body nearer. He squeezed her hand. Shivering, jumping, giggling, to the maddening taps of the drums that throbbled like wine gone to the head. Swaying, gliding, sliding to the moaning tones of the long trumpet that cried like some jungle animal in the night. Round and round, up and down, back and forth. The warmth of pressed bodies, huddled together, trembling like the broad leaves of an umbrella tree in a light wind. And over it all presided a heavy-set man with hanging, purple jowls—Kelly.

In one corner of the room he stood now, Kelly, watching the patrons of his Cafe with careful eyes. Nodding to acquaintances; stopping at a table to talk; sitting for a moment to have a drink; ushering newcomers to special tables; that was Kelly. For he knew them all—all these people of the Tenderloin who came to dance and drink and talk and plan and fight in his Cafe. Gangsters, prizefighters, crooks, politicians, gamblers—he knew them all by their first names.

Kelly scanned the room, watching the erstwhile dancers giving their orders. He noted with approval the waiters scurrying about, their trays heaped with sandwiches and filled with glasses. Wednesday night—it was always a big night in Kelly's Rinside Cafe, with special entertainment as an added attraction. Finally he clapped his hands several times and caught the glances of a half dozen girls, now sitting at various tables. At his nod the girls rose and came over towards the owner of the Cafe, some hurrying, some lagging behind to talk to their escorts.

"Time to go on," he called to the girls, herding them towards a door that opened off the rear of the Cafe. "Hurry up!" He called again.

Rose, her hand still in Chuck's, looked up and answered his signal. "Kelly's calling us," she smiled at the man beside her.

"All right, kid, see you later," Chuck gave her hand a final squeeze. "Make it snappy!"

"I will, Chuck," Rose promised, as she turned and waved a final farewell.

Chuck sauntered over to one of the tables that faced directly onto the dance floor, where he could command a view of all that took place. He sat down opposite a small, thin man, who looked up and grinned at his approach, lighting a cigarette.

"Well, how's it going, Sparrow, old kid?" Chuck blew a cloud of smoke through his nose and looked at the man across the table.

"O. K., Chuck," Sparrow stretched out his legs, lolling back in his chair dreamily and watching his companion through half-closed lids.

His loudly chinked suit of black and white, a little too small for him, gave his lean figure a grotesque appearance, which was further enhanced by the light tan vest, rather soiled, and the brilliant red tie with its huge pin of diamonds formed in the shape of a question mark. His lean, lined face had a death-like pallor, but now the lines were smoothed out as though he were at peace with the world.

Chuck beckoned to a waiter who came hurrying forward. "Well, what'll it be, Sparrow?" he asked, rousing his companion from his seeming lethargy.

"Beer," Sparrow responded laconically. "Make that two," Chuck nodded to the waiter, who dashed off to fill the order.

"How ya makin' out with th' broad, Chuck?" Sparrow pulled on a much-chewed cigarette that dangled from his fingers.

"Jeez! I'm getting along great, old kid! They all fall for me, sooner or later," Chuck announced with pride, flicking an ash from his none-too-well brushed coat.

"Yeh, I'll say th' do," Sparrow smiled at his companion with almost as much pride as Chuck himself had shown. He looked with evident admiration on the other's clean-cut features, his finely chiseled nose, his rounded chin, and the well-set shoulders. "Say, youse could have easy pickin', Chuck. Youse oughter play 'em Park Avenue dames fer a fare-a-well, wit' at mug of yours. Why don'tcha?"

"Why don't I? I got some pride, Sparrow," Chuck pointed his cigarette at his companion to emphasize his words. "I'll take mine straight. Let the pretty boys play the gigolos. I'm out for bigger stuff 'an that."

"Youse could rake in th' coin, I'm tellin' ya," Sparrow insisted. "Ya don't have to stop at none of 'at gigolo stuff. Think of all 'em sparklers. 'Ey got rocks big as a chunk of ice. An' ya ain't gotta pack no gats to git 'em."

"Aw, lay off, Sparrow!" Chuck swept his hand through the air in a gesture of contempt. "I tell you I'm getting mine the way I want it and—"

His eloquence was interrupted by the waiter who was serving the order. The foaming glasses lifted as they sped across the table, and Sparrow reached for his with a thirsty gesture. Without waiting for Chuck he downed half the contents of the mug.

"What do I owe you, son?" Chuck drew a thin roll of bills from his pocket and peeled off a five dollar note, handing it to the waiter. "An' bring me back some change," he cautioned, as the man hurried away, grinning.

"Spendin' it heavy, ain'tcha?" Sparrow raised questioning eyes. "Sure, what's the diff? Chuck shrugged his shoulders. "We got a lot more coming same way that come. Easy pickings, Sparrow—easy pickings! Well, down the old hatch!" He lifted his glass and drank.

CHAPTER II.

Back in the small, untidy dressing room, "Kelly's Girls" were hurriedly stepping out of their dresses and hanging them along on the pegs that decorated one side of the narrow space. Shoes and stockings were kicked underneath the long board that served as a dressing table for the six dancers who made up one of the features of the evening's entertainment. Quickly they sat down on the backless chairs that were lined up in front of the mildewed, fly-specked mirror, and began making up.

Six different types, they were, ranging from light blonde in coloring to the darkest of brunettes. Scraps of conversation ran up and down the lines. News of the evening, gleaned from various sources, was passed from one to another, as six faces peered into the mirror, dabbing on brilliant spots of rouge, painting vermilion lips until they gleamed; applying mascara with a lavish hand.

New Servant: "Can I have a different clock put in my bedroom, mum?"

Mistress: "Why I put that clock in your room for a special purpose—it's an alarm clock."

One: "Did you fill your date last night?"

More: "I hope so. She ate everything in sight."

"He's a tough baby."

"How so?"

"They tried to electrocute him, and he blew out a fuse!"

He (anxiously): "I'm afraid we'll never get there in time for the ceremony."

She: "Don't worry—Phyllis is always late for her weddings."

Another easy way to get on your feet is to teach the kids to drive the car."

Edward Wallace—What do the three balls in front of a pawn shop mean?

"Bill! Hollings—Two to one you won't get it back."

A very loquacious woman talked a man pretty nearly to death at a dinner party, and then, as she got up with the other women to go into the drawing room, she tapped him on the arm with her fan and said: "I talk a lot, don't I? But if you men told the truth I believe you'd all admit that you like talkative women better than the others."

"The others?" said the man. "What others?"

What Every Man Will Do

A woman reader of this newspaper has submitted the following observations:

Every man when he knows he is in the wrong, assumes an air of great dignity.

Every man thinks his time is important and sets his watch at every jeweler's window, at every town clock, and whenever the radio announcer mentions the hour.

Every man discusses himself with every woman that will listen to him.

Every man clings with tenacity to the easiest chair.

Every man pretends indifference to clothes.

Every man knows he could cook and manage a house.

Every man hates being polite to his wife.

Every man thinks he has wonderful self-control because the woman had the last word.

Every man believes he is severe with his children.

Every man scatters ashes.

Every man is deceived by flattery.

Every man is satisfied with his weight and himself.

Every man cherishes the thought that he is a he-man and superior to woman.

Every man considers himself logical.

Every man is sentimental.

Every man thinks he knows women.

Every man is a spoiled child.

HEALTH TALK

"Prepared to celebrate the Fourth of July, a boy of twelve a few days ago filled his pocket with giant torpedoes, and then fell with such force that the torpedoes exploded, tearing a hole nine inches in diameter in his flesh. While this can be classified as a freak accident it nevertheless serves to attract attention to the inevitable Fourth of July casualties," said Dr. Theodore J. Appel, Secretary of Health, today.

"It may be interesting to note that in the past twenty years 61,000 men, women and children have been killed, maimed or injured in Fourth of July accidents—a rather large price to pay for the celebration of the birthday of even so great a nation as the United States.

"While municipal ordinances in the larger cities of the Commonwealth forbid the sale and use of explosives within their borders, the fact remains that nearly every conceivable form of fireworks can be readily purchased outside the city limits along the main highways. Thus the intended protection to children is largely lost.

"While it is very natural to accede to childish importunities, one's enthusiasm should not overcome judgment. Particularly is this required when faced with the roadside stand that appealingly displays powder in the guise of fire-crackers and in other forms, the use of which may maim and even slay. Patriotism, after all, begins at home; and an enthusiasm which permits small children to purchase powder goods along the highway that are forbidden in the city is, to say the least, an extremely poor manifestation of love of country, not to mention love for one's youngsters.

"Some years ago lock-jaw took a tremendous toll because of the so-called toy pistol. Just remember that any kind of a gun which will shoot blank cartridges is far from being a toy. And the cheaper it is, the more likely is the trigger-spring to be weak, thus causing premature and unlooked-for explosions with their dangerous flesh wound consequences.

"It may sound a bit arbitrary to deny one's off-spring the dubious, though undoubtedly exciting experience of 'playing with fire,' but if at the end of the day it is a question of an injured or mortally wounded child against a happy and healthy one, then there is no sound argument against the safety side.

"Therefore, under no circumstances permit small children to play with fire crackers or fire-works; if this sort of thing must be a part of the Fourth of July celebration then keep the children at a safe distance from them.

"In the event of this warning being disregarded and a powder burn, however slight, resulting, give the victim the advantage of immediate medical advice. Tetanus, commonly known as lock-jaw, may result if this suggestion is not followed.

"Be a patriot by all means, teach the children the meaning of Fourth of July and permit them to enjoy it. But let the fire-crackers alone and manage the fireworks yourself. Be safe and sane and sensible, rather than fool-hardy, over-enthusiastic—and sorry."

String of Beads, Bark Apron; African Flapper Dressed Up

Miss Alice O'Brien Says, Jungle Belle Is Smarter Than U. S. Sister

By SHIRLEY KIRKE
International Illustrated News Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK—"She wears a string of beads, a bark apron and a smile; she carries her head with a jaunty air, walks erect and with an assurance that many a civilized woman might envy; and she is clean cut, beautiful of body and as tireless on the trail as the tawny tiger she so resembles."

The SHE in question is the African flapper, whom Miss Alice O'Brien, globe-trotter, asserts is better dressed than her American sister. Just returned from a seven months' exploration of the Belgian Congo, the American girl is convinced that the heart of darkest Africa is safer than the sidewalks of New York—and a lot more interesting.

"My experience is that Africa is more civilized than the average person dreams," she said. "It is queer, strange, but less physically challenging than the reminiscences of travelers indicate.

"The comfort of travel in the Belgian Congo flabbergasted me. I had a lot of preconceived ideas of what the hardships would be; and most of them were wrong. Old ladies who want to go to a warm climate for their health could attempt such a trip in perfect safety, providing, of course, they stuck to the main routes. They could not undertake safaris into uncharted wilderness as we did.

"At Stanleyville we sailed up the Congo in a big double-deck wheeler in de luxe suites. The old boat used to ply the Mississippi river—just fancy! It was taken apart, shipped to the Congo, then set up. Now it is one of a fleet of twenty vessels."

Perhaps Miss O'Brien's most thrilling experience came about when King Niapu danced for her

MISS ALICE O'BRIEN
(International Illustrated News)

party in his chief village. His two hundred wives squatted on low pedestals of carved ivory, ranged behind him in a semi-circle. Silhouetted against the flare of a camp fire, Niapu crouched, stalked and stamped, wearing a headdress of hawk feathers, a leopard skin flung around him. His medicine men were there, too, to drive away evil spirits. These made mysterious passes at invisible beings, stabbing them lest they bedevil the king as he danced.

Following the ceremony the monarch was host to the party at a midnight supper which was served outside the village in a jungle grove.

Effect of Lafayette's Ideals Is Told of By Legionnaire

ed. Washington, having received a warning from the loyal French youth that Lee was retreating instead of attacking, had turned rout into advance.

"The aide-de-camp of the French general was struck down at his side by a ball. Other officers and orderly dragoons fled from the close fire. Although under the mouths of the cannon, in an open space where he had advanced to reconnoitre, Lafayette approached the wounded man to see if life remained and he could give succor. Seeing his aide was past assistance, Lafayette slowly started away. General Clinton, in command of the English, having recognized the white horse as Lafayette's, had the opportunity of wiping out a formidable foe, but in admiration of the brave act of his opponent gave the order not to fire on him.

"Others will tell you of the battle. Suffice for me to recall Lafayette's own words of praise for his beloved commander-in-chief:

"General Washington seemed to turn back Fortune by a glance; his noble dignity, his grace, and presence of mind, were never more manifest."

"Lafayette fought on through the whole Revolutionary war. He became a bond of unity between the French and America peoples. He returned to France and urged the sending of French troops to America. He sought command of these, but after his plan was accepted and another—Comte de Rochambeau—was placed in command, he accepted the decision without sign of disappointment.

"He was in command of troops in Virginia and was dusting the heels of Cornwallis when the latter fell back on Yorktown. The young Frenchman tightened his lines, but laid aside personal glory for cool judgment, and instead of risking an attack, waited until the forces of Washington arrived.

"Lafayette was present at the surrender of Cornwallis, but the rejoicing over the victory of his cherished dream, liberty, came as his heart was torn with the news that his first child was dead in France. He returned to his native land as quickly as possible.

"As soon as he arrived in France, he set about working for the liberty of religious worship. He wrote to Washington urging that they jointly buy an estate where they could try the experiment of enfranchising the negroes and using them as farm laborers. He felt that the innovation would be successful and that their example would be followed by others in America and the West Indies. Singly, he tried his experiment, the second of his ideals, along the line he suggested to Washington, by purchasing an estate in French Guiana.

"With his third ideal alive in his heart, Lafayette then became the champion of the Protestants in France. At that time the King was required to take an oath to suppress heretics in the domain of France. The marriages of Protestants had no validity at law. Children born to such marriages were illegitimate. The contracting parties were liable to go to the gallows. No other religion, excepting the Church of Rome, was tolerated. Protestants were sent to the galleys in slavery.

"Lafayette worked untiringly for the betterment of the condition of the negro slaves and the Protestants. To us, one hundred and fifty years later, his ideals are realities; his three principles and hopes are axioms, and we would declare anyone insane who would not say that men have the right to govern themselves; to practice such religious worship as their consciences dictate, and that all men have the right to be their own masters regardless of the hue of their skin.

"Willing to lay down his own life for the accomplishment of these things, Lafayette felt they could be brought about without the spilling of blood. He believed that all men were basically good and that it was only evil surroundings which made them bad. His record of four revolutions compares favorably with the record of any soldier of fortune. However, he was not a soldier of fortune, but a practical idealist. Fortune and honor were already his. He sought only to aid his fellow man.

"So it is that the greatest acts of Lafayette were not performed during his life time. He received the applause of a fickle public while yet alive, but it was in the permanent impression of his ideals upon the hearts of a free people, the people of America for whom he helped to win that priceless freedom, that our Hero of the Revolution made his greatest contribution.

"The story of Lafayette came down to our succeeding generations as that of a true friend who would risk all, fortune, honor and fame, to help the oppressed. Decades passed after America had honored the living man. Disturbances and misunderstandings between France and America occurred—but always the memory of Lafayette hovered above the lowly things.

own freedom—all for the advancement of his ideals.

"His fame is claimed as a priceless heritage for the youth of America, but at times he was a veritable god to the French people.

"Lafayette belongs not to France and to America alone. He belongs to all freemen. As long as liberty shall live, his position is assured as a guide for the conduct of republics. He saw liberty ravished and despoiled; saw her living in low places, dirty and corrupt; but he never lost his own conception that it was due to evil environment and lack of experience which caused her to go that wanton way.

"For five years Lafayette lost his own liberty because of his known activities in the cause of freedom for all of God's creatures. He never weakened. Proud of his personal honor, he even dropped the aristocratic 'de' from his name that he might come closer to those he was seeking to help and further the cause. Always he pointed straight forward to his objective—liberty for his fellow man.

"Because of monuments left behind and glorious pages written into her history, the word 'Napoleon' still thrills the French breast. Yet, Napoleon contributed nothing toward the winning of the World War, except possibly the canals and roads that he built. Lafayette, on the other hand, brought into that conflict on the side of France, the land of his youth, the people he had loved to their freedom.

"Lafayette did much for his country when alive, as he did for all humanity, but his greatest service to France came eighty-three years after his

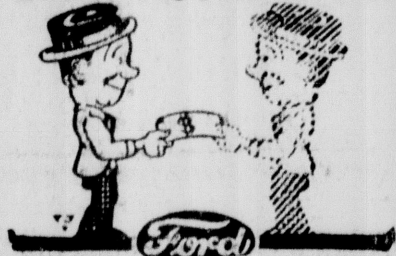

Three Generations of Hoovers

Here is an exclusive study of Mrs. Herbert Hoover, wife of the Republican nominee, holding in her arms Herbert Hoover, Jr., the son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Hoover, Jr., while her proud mama looks on. The young gentleman apparently is more concerned with wiggling his toes than the honor that has recently come to his family.

HERE IS ENGINEERING

that really means something to the

Automobile Owner

THERE'S a deal of talk these days about the engineering back of this or that car. Most of it covers a multitude of sins or the lack of something definite to talk about in the cars themselves.

Even in the face of this situation, we want to tell you what Reo engineering means to the buyer of a Reo Flying Cloud. Because Reo engineering can be measured by Reo owners in terms of dollars and cents, of performance and comfort.

Here, precisely, are some of the facts about Reo engineering.

1. Reo engineers have the same experimental facilities that are available in any laboratory. This means that Reo engineers test carefully and select materials and parts that they know have the strength and the durability necessary to uphold the Reo reputation for long life.

2. Reo engineers will not content themselves with the road tests possible in a limited testing area. Before the first Flying Cloud ever started down the production lines, Flying Cloud engines, Flying Cloud brakes, Flying Cloud clutches, transmissions, steering gears, axles—every integral part—had been subjected to hundreds of thousands of miles of terrific punishment on the highways of the Middle West, through the sands of the deserts, over the rocky trails of the Sierras, through the muds of Louisiana bottom lands.

3. Reo engineers are admitted leaders in their field. There may be probably are—others of equal skill and foresight. But Reo engineers are unique in their freedom to develop their ideas and put into effect their plans. For Reo engineers are unrestricted by a financial policy, built of necessity around a huge indebtedness; Reo engineers are unhampered by the production problems imposed inevitably by a large, immobile plant; and Reo engineers are supported by a capable production personnel whose loyalty to Reo is reflected by the lowest rate of labor turn-over in the industry.

4. Because of these conditions, Reo engineers are free to take advantage of new developments quickly, free to pass these along to Reo buyers more promptly, free to direct the production of automobiles which embody engineering ideals rather than production requirements.

These facts about Reo engineering will take on additional significance the moment you compare Reo Flying Cloud performance, comfort, ease and construction with any other car. There's one near you—try it for yourself.

When you shop in a big city

You know your Fifth Avenue perhaps. Or all your life you've been familiar with the shopping sections of Boston—you are certain just which side street to turn into for the specialty store you have in mind. . . . But these days, you'll find yourself at home wherever you shop. You'll not be at a loss to get exactly what you want in St. Louis or Seattle or Syracuse.

When you buy advertised products, you can buy just as wisely and do just as well—wherever you go—as you would if you went into the store on Main street at home, where your mother and your grandmother have traded for years. For you can trust advertised products and the stores that sell them, exactly as you would believe merchants who have been your lifelong friends in the same small towns.

Read the advertisements in this paper—especially if you are a stranger in town. They will guide and befriend your buying

"BILL" FINE PITCHES AN INVINCIBLE GAME HERE

Bristol Boy Performs in Great Shape for Keystone Team

FINAL SCORE IS 12 TO 6

By T. M. Jono

Last evening on Sullivan's Field Keystone won their second straight game in as many nights by vanquishing the Leedom's nine by the score of 12 to 6.

The game was more closely played than the score indicates, and at no time during the game was a commanding lead safe.

"Bill" Fine's pitching was invincible, especially when he was in holes. The airplane builders' infield, though erratic at times, tightened in the pinches and several times squelched the attempted rallies of the carpet-makers. Out in the gardens the work was very impressive. With the stick "Eddie" Roe, with four hits, and Rodgers and Knecht, with three a-piece started. Walbuser and Rodgers starred in the field. Brooks served them for Mulholland's clan and was socked to and fro but remained to see the last man die out. Connors, White and Cochrane stood out prominently with their team's clubs.

Leedom's tallied in the first inning on Cochrane's single, Connors' sacrifice, an infield out by Riola and White's bingle.

Keystone was blanked in their half. One, two, three, went the Leedom's players in the second. The Aeronautics pulled a run together in their part on Walbuser's walk. Esterly's sacrifice and Fine's one base hit to left.

No one reached first in the third. Three Leedom's players were put away easily in the fourth. In the Keystone half, four runs were garnered on singles by Deitrich, Custer, Esterly, Rodgers, and Fine's two-bagger.

The carpetmakers reduced the airplane-makers' lead by counting twice in the fifth on Cochrane's second single, a passed ball, Riola's one-base wallop, another passed ball and an overthrow at third base.

Keystone continued their run, scoring by denting the platter twice in their fifth. Rodgers singled. Knecht bunted and beat the throw to first, the hit going for a single. Rodgers scored on the play and Knecht took second on the throw home. Roe's single and Barrett's infield out scored Knecht.

Leedom's rallied in their last part of the fifth, scoring three tallies on Wilkenson's single, Brooks' pass, Connors' single, Riola's single and White's double which Esterly barely touched but could not hold. Riola went out at the plate to end the Leedom's scoring.

At this junction of the game Keystone wished to have the game called because of darkness. Mulholland claimed he could still see the ball, so Delaney ordered Keystone to continue playing and try to complete seven innings. However, this became impossible for Keystone scored five runs in their bat and by that time it was so dark that it would have been foolish to continue playing.

All Keystone players are asked to report promptly at 1:30 p. m., Saturday on Sullivan's field. An important practice will be held.

SWIMMING CHAMPS TO MEET AT DOYLESTOWN

DOYLESTOWN, June 28.—There will be 650 reserved seats available for the big inter-sectional swimming meet here Saturday afternoon at the Fanny Chapman Memorial Pool. Every seat surrounding the pool will be reserved and according to those in charge, at the pool reservations are being made rapidly.

The handsome trophies that will be competed for by 120 swimmers representing nine of the best known swimming clubs in the Eastern United States, will be placed on exhibition at the Shive hardware store, Main and State streets by George F. Pawling, manager of the meet.

This morning it was announced a 100 per cent Doylestown team to be known as the Fanny Chapman Memorial Swimming Club, has been entered in the meet together with the other clubs. Entries now include Philadelphia Turngemeinde, Big Brothers, Wilmington Y. M. C. A., Penn Athletic Club of Philadelphia; Philadelphia Elks Swimming Club, Young Men's Hebrew Association, Atlantic City Swimming Club, President's Swimming Club of Atlantic City, and the Fanny Chapman Memorial Swimming Club, of Doylestown.

Saturday's big meet will start promptly at 2:30. The various swimming events will be first on the program and the closing events will be the dives and a special feature diving act by Harry Gancey and Joe McCaffrey, of the Penn Athletic Club.

Another big feature announcement of the meet came along yesterday when Mr. Pawling announced that Miss Frances Clarke, of the Philadelphia Turngemeinde, one of the greatest women swimmers in America today, has consented to be here Saturday to participate in the various events. She is a national pentathlon champion of great fame.

Local officials who will serve in addition to the officials to be furnished by the Officials' Club of Philadelphia include George F. Pawling, Jr., N. F. Power, Joseph J. Conroy, George Sommer, Edward B. Watson, Robert Beans, Joseph Ruos, A. Russell

CLEVELANDERS SUFFER SLUMP

By C. D. Hawkins

CLEVELAND, June 27.—With mid-season having been reached in the baseball world, Cleveland baseball fans in the majority agree that it will be necessary to procure better pitchers, harder hitters and better all-around ball players for the Cleveland American League club before another pennant waves from a local flag-pole.

It has become plainly apparent fans say, that the process of bolstering up the club is to be a slow one. While owners of the team it is said are perfectly willing and ready to pay substantial sums for finished major league players, there is another side to the question—other owners are not so anxious to sell.

Strenuous Efforts
On the other hand, President Alva Bradley and his associates have done, and are doing everything possible to obtain promising minor league players. Since taking over control of the Indians, at the end of the 1927 season, no expense and no effort has been spared. "Smiling Billy" Evans, former American League umpire who called balls and strikes for many years, and who knows baseball and baseball players, if any man does, was made general manager of the club, and Roger Peckinpaugh, well-known shortstop, playing-manager. Despite all these men have done and are still doing, the club stays in a rut.

Starting the 1928 season in splendid style, the Indians recently slumped to their 1927 form. From present appearances, local lovers of America's greatest professional outdoor sport agree, the tribe will finish in about the same place as last year, when they landed on the sixth rung of the American League ladder.

This season, the club has shown especial weakness in right field and at third base. Homer Summa, regular right-fielder, while undoubtedly the best bet to field the position, has shown rather poorly at bat. True, he has been robbed of several near-doubles during the early season, but at other times he failed miserably when a single was most needed.

Got Poor Breaks
Other players have been smacking the ball at a fair average but the team, as a whole has not received the so-called "breaks," losing many games by one run, at least fourteen contests having been dropped by one tally.

Johnny Hodapp, who was playing a fine game at the "hot corner," was laid on the shelf recently with injuries. He had been hitting well also. Ed Morgan who replaced him, has been hitting in great style but fielding weakly.

To top things off, the hurling staff has been a disappointment after starting the season in winning fashion and pinch hitters have failed to connect when connections were badly needed.

To make a long story short, the Indians, after starting the season in "wild western fashions," have lost their "tomahawks" somewhere along the route.

They're Ready for the National Open

Good, bad and indifferent scores were recorded in practice rounds at Olympia Fields, where the cream of the country's golfdom is gathered for the National Championships. Here are some of the "big shots" you will read about when the tourney opens: Left to right, Gene Sarazen, Bill Mehlhorn, Harry Cooper, Walter Hagen and Johnny Farrell. Below is the one and only Bobby Jones, king of them all.
